Pet Names

As any new parent knows, picking a name for your new addition is a difficult but important job! To help you get started, here are some useful tips in choosing a name for your dog or cat. Please remember that the pet name you choose will be used dozens of times a day to call, praise and perhaps scold.

Pick a name that the pet can easily recognize. Animals respond better to one or two syllable names.

Choose a name that's both easy to call out and one that you are happy calling out. Calling out "Jack" or "Zoe" in the park may be far less embarrassing than calling out "Death Breath".

For dogs avoid names that sound like the standard commands of No, Stay, Sit, Come, Down or Fetch. For example "Joe" is probably too close to "No". It can be difficult for dogs to tell the difference between similar sounding words.

Waiting a few days to study your pet's behavior and personality can help pick the right name.

Pick a name that will grow with the pet. For example "Kitten" may be less appropriate for a full grown cat.
